PACIFICA RADIO NEW YORK

SEPTEMBER - OCTOBER 1997

Dr. Ernesto "Che" Guevara

30 Years After He Was "Disappeared" by the CIA

REPORT

TO THE LISTENER

VALERIE van ISLER, GENERAL MANAGER

Public broadcasting is the independent source of news, information and culture. And the soul of a nation lies in its culture.... The culture is the lifeblood of a society. Public broadcasting is the lifeline of the people's communication system in this country. And as long as it stays alive, the culture will stay alive." Harry Belafonte, International artist.

As we approach the end of our fiscal year in September, some very important events will also take place in Washington. The battle over the future of public broadcasting has been joined once again. This month, the Republican congress is scheduled to vote on the appropriation for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting which helps fund community radio stations all across the nation. This decision will be a critical one because we are at the turning point for the "people's communication system." It will either take public broadcasting into a viable future by allocating the necessary funding to meet the challenges of the 21st century or, the forces under Gingrich, Hefley and others will continue the pattern of fiscal hemorrhage that they started in 1994 which has cut the lifeblood out of the system and is leading to its slow death. Over the past two years alone, more than $90 million has been slashed from the CPB appropriation and community stations have been especially hurt by these painful and devastating cuts.

WBAI is one of the largest stations in community radio and we are right at the nerve center in the media capitol of the country. We believe we have a special responsibility not only in advocating for our own interests, but in taking a leadership role for hundreds of other stations in this fight for the future of public broadcasting. And that is why your support for our work will help not only WBAI, but we will take this message to Washington on behalf of many others. The Republicans have stated time and again that this public system should be privatized--which means let it die if the support is not there and then sell it to the highest corporate bidder! And they would have done this years ago except that public outcry and pressure stopped them, if only temporarily. What they did do is enact recisions and cutbacks year after year and are proposing them yet again.

We believe that, by its very nature, the people's system must be funded by federal, public dollars and that cuts which threaten our very survival have reached the point of no return. As a listener, you have a crucial part to play once again. We are calling on all our members and friends to help us fight this struggle by doing at least two things to keep the "Public" in Public Broadcasting:

*The first is to demonstrate that community radio is a vital, national resource for you by giving as generously as you can to WBAI right now. Congress thinks that we are a burden. We believe community radio is a necessity. Your financial support is an index of proof of our value.

*We also ask you to take action on the national level. In September, the vote will be called on the CPB allocation. We urge you to contact your congressional representatives in the House and Senate and let them know that public broadcasting must be preserved by voting in favor of the subcommittee appropriation of $300 million for CPB and to approve the recommended $15 million for the telecommunications facilities fund. These two programs are the major sources of support that provide assistance to all public broadcasting and especially to WBAI. Make your voice and view heard by calling your representatives today and urge them to vote Yes! for public broadcasting and approve the above recommendations with NO CUTS.

Our programming over the next two months will once again demonstrate the value and importance of WBAI as a leader in community radio. We'll bring you some of the very best in broadcasting as we cover the Caribbean festival in our annual program on Labor Day. And please tune in for the entire week of September 13-19, for WBAI specials in celebration of Latino Heritage Month. We will feature a series of in-depth reports exploring the history and contributions of the many communities which make up New York's Latino population.

In October, we will be broadcasting some extraordinary specials as part of our Fall Membership drive which runs from October 6 through October 22. Some of these include: The CIA 50 Years Later--An Historical Analysis of foreign policy intrigue, manipulation, cold war politics, exploitation and world-wide scandals; a program with Prof. Michio Kaku and guests featuring his brand new work on the universe, science and technology; a 30th-anniversary special on Che Guevara's life and his legacy to the Americas and the World. And please stay tuned for many more unique programs from Democracy Now and Wake-Up Call.

And finally, for the past several years, we have been talking about the need for a new home for WBAI since our lease at the present location will be up quite soon. Now, that lease will end in less than 10 months. And so, for more than a year, we have been conducting an intensive and extensive space search looking at sites all over the city that might be suitable as a new home for the station. Our current location was a "temporary" move more than 20 years ago when the station had to relocate on an emergency basis and landed here on 35th Street. Over the past seven years, WBAI has become one of the largest community stations in the country with an increased budget and greatly expanded staff and we have completely outgrown these "temporary quarters." We have particularly looked at buildings for non-profit organizations like us as a possible site because there are savings and potential abatements only available in these situations. Our space/facility committee of staff and board members has visited over 40 sites and we have entered negotiations for space in a non-profit building and hope for closure in the near future. Please stay tuned and we will keep you posted on these and other developments. Thanks again for your continuing interest and support.

MINISTRY OF CULTURE

MATTHEW FINCH,
Director of Arts &
Cultural Programming

"Do you guys have a rule," a listener asked me recently, "that you have to die to make the cover of the Folio?" Her confusion was understandable. It seems that in trying to be a station with a memory, we've come off as a station that celebrates our losses more than our bounty. In fact, what we celebrate is the rare gift of our heroes, knowing how quickly they can be lost. This issue of the Folio goes to press in the wake of three significant transitions. Each was noted internationally, but most U.S. television and radio reported it this way:

> William S. Burroughs, junkie author and degenerate has died in Kansas at 83. A member of the "beat generation" he once shot his wife in the head.*
> The musician known as Fela is dead. His blend of jazz stylings and African rhythms brought him worldwide acclaim. He played the saxophone and died of AIDS.
> World Music superstar, Nusrat Fateh Ali Khan is dead at 49. The portly Pakistani vocalist's fans included Oliver Stone and Peter Gabriel. He once recorded with Eddie Vedder of "Pearl Jam."

Luckily, 'BAI listeners had the chance to know these three artists much better, since their work appeared frequently on these airwaves. Each knew the hazards of a misinformed audience. Burroughs knew well how easily his work could be used as nihilistic wallpaper and Fela and Nusrat brought centureies of musical tradition through the muddy waters of international pop. Producers, here, celebrated their words and music, but also gave attention to the sound behind the sound and the place from which it came.

In the weeks to come, tributes to the artistry of Fela Amikulapo Kuti and Nusrat Fatch Ali Khan will join already-planned salutes to Carlos Santana and master archivist, Alan Lomax. William S. Burroughs will lurk within the mix as he always has.... For those who imagine that music and performance are negative air-space, you'll have another chance to listen on the positive side and to take, as they say, a heapin' helpin' of the bounty around us.

YOUR COMMUNITY AND LABOR REPORT

MONDAYS 2:00-3:00 P.M

PRODUCED BY: MIMI ROSENBERG AND KEN NASH

Building Bridges: Your Community and Labor Report recently completed its Union Summer '97 Radio series. We sent out three 1-hour programs over the public radio satellite reaching 30 stations nationwide. In addition to coverage of the UPS strike and Detroit newspaper lockout, we followed the union organizing drives of the Watsonville, California strawberry pickers and North Carolina's poultry processing workers. We also broadcast a conversation with humorist Michael Moore on downsizing and utilizing the culutural front as a launching pad from which to stir resistance.

During the course of the Union Summer broadcasts Building Bridges learned that the series was a winner in the International Labor Communications Association's ninth biennial Film and Broadcast Competition. There were 115 entries in this year's contest. The contest recognizes achievement by labor organizations in video and audio communications and arts.

Now its time for Building Bridges to turn its attention to Labor Day September 1, from 2:00 to 6:00 p.m., we will gyrate through the air waves with hundreds of thousands of revelers on Eastern Parkway. Dressed in our celebratory, sparkling duds we will intersperse reports live from the carnival with discussions with distinguished representatives of workers movements from the Caribbean and the Americas. Of course, no Labor Day/West Indian Day would be complete without AFL-CIO President John Sweeney and Calypso Rose who will shimmy with you by virtue of modern technology. Oh what a ball we will have!.

By the way, remember to tune into Building Bridges: Your Community and Labor Report, in our regular time slot on Monday, September 8, from 2:00 to 3:00 p.m. for highlights from the AFL-CIO's Labor Day Parade.

THE STORY NO ONE WILL COVER

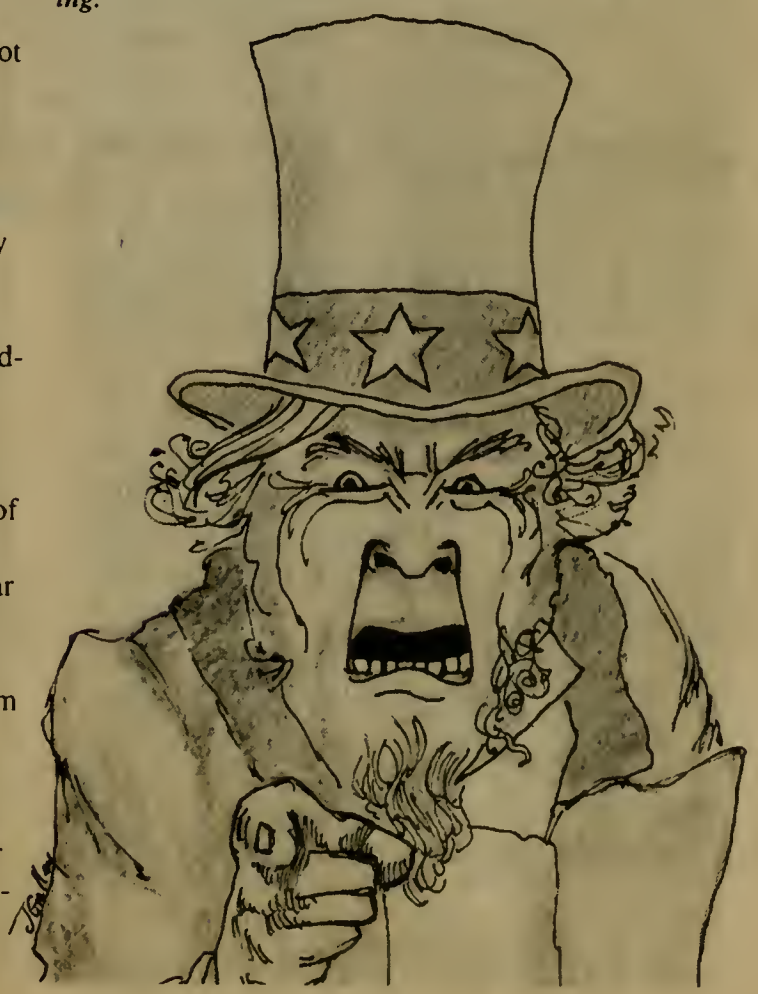
JOSE SANTIAGO

WBAI reports on the the July 18, 1997 Riot at Mohawk Prison (Rome, NY) have led to a federal investigation. The U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of New York has initiated a probe of the July 18th uprising, which may have been the largest prison uprising since Attica. The probe, by the FBI, will look into allegations that Mohawk guards are among the most abusive in the state prison system and that inmates have been subjected to a pattern of brutality primarily directed at inmates of color. The preliminary investigation was ordered by U.S. Attorney Thomas Maroney after he was alerted to WBAI's news reports by Brooklyn Assemblymember Dan Feldman, who is chair of the New York State Assembly's Corrections Committee. Tapes of WBAI's initial reports on the riot are now being reviewed by the FBI for use in their investigation.

The stories, reported by WBAI News Director, Jose Santiago, have shown that the riot was not caused by overcrowding as state correction officials have contended, but that it was the result of long-simmering tensions at Mohawk Prison brought on by a longstanding pattern of verbal and physical abuse by guards, particularly a group of guards who wear a tattoo depicting a black child with a noose around its neck. The riot, in which hundreds of inmates took control of sections of the prision but were subdued with teargas after hours of negotiations, came a day after a 22-year old African-American inmate allegedly committed suicide in an isolation unit commonly referred to as "the Box." Our news reports included statements from two former inmates who had spent time in the Box and who claimed it is virtually impossible to hang yourself in those specialized cells. Our reports also focused on a civil suit that has been filed by a former inmate who alleges that he was denied adequate medical treatment and was routinely abused while incarcerated at Mohawk.

News of the federal investigation has not been reported by mainstream news orgainzations. A group of inmate relatives has been formed as a result of our stories. As of this writing, the newly formed organization was planning a press briefing to share information with other news organizations in the city. One of the group's main concerns was that guards would seek revenge against any inmate whose relatives speak out about the abuses. One consideration is that inmate relatives who participate in the news conference will wear hoods to protect their identity. In subsequent reports, WBAI News has reported claims by inmates that they have been confined to "the Box" for attempting to speak with state investigators probing the incident. In one recent interview, an inmate, speaking with us directly from Mohawk Prison said that many inmates would come forward, if they were guaranteed protection by the federal government. All parties in this on-going story are operating in a climate of fear.

WBAI's News Director, Jose Santiago, is a two-time recipient of the "Golden Reel," the National Federation of Community Broadcaster's top award for community reporting.



Colombian Paramilitaries
The Greatest Threat to Peace

By Mario A. Murillo

After General Harold Bedoya, the commander of the Colombian Armed Forces, was removed from his position by President Ernesto Samper on July 23, a number of commentators applauded the measure as evidence that Colombia was a true democracy where civilians were firmly in control of the military. Samper was finally being viewed as a man "who had put his pants on", demonstrating who was "boss."

The only concrete result of Bedoya's removal is that it ended the growing rift between he and Samper, which had reached its peak a month earlier when FARC guerillas released 70 soldiers who were held hostage for 288 days, a process Bedoya characterized as a "circus filled with clowns." That Bedoya was fired did nothing to change the direction of the escalating armed conflict however, and will amount to very little if the government doesn't address the more serious issue of the nefarious links between the army and the increasing number of paramilitary groups.

The Colombian government and its lackeys in the media continue painting the guerillas as the main cause of the nation's problems,

This is not to say that there aren't some positive things that can be seen from this latest shift in the Colombian military leadership. The removal of Bedoya, one of the strongest opponents of renewing peace negotiations with the guerillas and an outspoken critic of the country's human rights organizations, paved the way for the Colombian army to sign on to an "end-use" agreement with the United States over its anti-drug military aid. This agreement, rejected wholeheartedly by Bedoya, places human rights conditions on any and all future military aid to Colombia, in order to prevent such aid from being used by elements of the Colombian armed forces to commit atrocities against the civilian population. Although, considering the U.S. track record in following up on its human rights rhetoric, this agreement must be viewed with caution, it should be greeted favorably after years of unconditional aid.

Bedoya's ouster could also be viewed as another small step by President Samper towards the beginning of a national dialogue with the guerillas. In late June, Samper gave Daniel Garcia Peña, director of the government's High Commission for Peace, and Jose Noé Ríos sixty days to renew contacts with the FARC and the ELN, in order to establish a framework for a possible peace negotiation. The 60 days are almost up, and with Bedoya out of the way, there is hope that the army will be more receptive to some level of continued dialogue with the insurgency.

However, it's difficult to be optimistic when one looks at the current situation. In the last few months, the war has intensified on all sides: the guerillas, the army, and the paramilitaries. The FARC and ELN have resumed joint operations in some parts of the country, hitting military and police targets, almost daily, in order to demonstrate that they are a major military force. In July alone, over 30 soldiers were killed and many more were wounded in direct attacks by the guerillas. Their offensive strikes, as well as the higher visibility and outspokenness on the part of the guerilla high command, reflect a strategy designed to strengthen its hand at the negotiating table, if they ever get there.

But the most complicated aspect of beginning a peace process in Colombia, and here the government must bear much of the responsibility, involves the growth and strengthening of the paramilitary forces which are spreading throughout the country. The paramilitaries - or "self-defense associations" - continue to flex their muscle in the northwestern region of Urabá, in the Middle Magdalena region, as well as in the central plains and the southern provinces of Cauca, Tolima and Nariño. In late July, 35 peasants were massacred by paramilitaries in the town of Mapiripán in the province of Meta.

Eyewit-nesses said the actions were carried out with the complicity of the army.

Among the more visible attacks in recent months were the murders of Mario Calderon and Elsa Alvarado, two researchers who worked for the Jesuit-run Center for Research and Popular Education (CINEP) in Bogotá. They, along with Elsa's father, Carlos Alvarado, were gunned down by a group of heavily armed men while sleeping in their apartment in the early morning hours of May 19. Witnesses say the assassins, dressed in black, entered the building identifying themselves only as officials of the Chief Prosecutor's office. Calderon and Alvarado were well-known for their work with marginalized communities in northeast Cundinamarca--about an hour outside of the capital--where there is a substantial guerilla and paramilitary presence. The murders were carried out in typical paramilitary fashion, but to date, no one has been charged with any of the crimes. It has led the country's non-governmental human rights organizations to demand more protection for those doing similar work throughout Colombia.

Last year, Human Rights Watch Americas released a study which documented the links between the armed forces and the paramilitary groups, especially in zones of intense conflict. The paramilitaries target communities perceived to be sympathetic to the guerillas, conduct major sweeps, and massacre civilians. These tactics have led to the displacement of thousands. Today there are more than one million internal refugees in Colombia, a direct result of this "dirty war."

In July, the Colombian Commission of Jurists reported that while human rights violations committed by state forces has dropped in recent years, those committed by paramilitary groups have risen considerably. Gustavo Gallon, executive director of the Commission, said this either means that the military is finally giving in to pressure from human rights groups, or that they've employed a different strategy, using paramilitaries to do their dirty work while they wash their hands of any responsibility. It should be pointed out that much of the paramilitary violence is committed in areas with a strong military presence.

The Colombian government and its media lackeys continue to paint the guerillas as the main cause of the nation's problems, fostering a climate that is not conducive to reconciliation and dialogue. Meanwhile, for the most part, they continue to brush aside the role of the other major armed sector--the paramilitaries, perhaps because they have a common target in the guerillas and their alleged civilian support base.

Paramilitary boss Carlos Castaño insists they have to be part of any peace process that takes place in Colombia, a position rejected by most human rights activists. This could prove to be the main roadblock to any future peace dialogue, since the guerillas demand that the paramilitaries be dismantled before beginning any talks...which brings us back to the President. If Samper really wanted to "put his pants on," he would handle the paramilitaries with the measures that such criminals warrant. Or is it that the new military leadership is not quite ready to give up on this end of its counterinsurgency strategy just yet?

JAMAICA EMANCIPATES ITSELF AGAIN

BY PATRICKA DALLAS

I know many Jamaicans who don't like reggae music. They associate it with Rastafarians whose hair they erroneously assume indicates they come from the lower classes. So they've never taken time out to listen to Bob Marley singing "Emancipate yourself from mental slavery" and they have not been too bothered about the demise of Emancipation Day as a national holiday on August 1.

That day marks a crucial part of our history when the slaves were given their freedom in 1843. Why did we stop commemorating it? Some say it was because the date was overpowered by Independence Day on August 4. But others feel that we were reluctant to celebrate something which remind us of our enslavement. We should bear in mind that independence may have created Jamaica's statehood but emancipation restored Jamaica's dignity.

Self-governed Jamaica is 35 years old now and I can remember the spirited celebrations of Jamaica's independence from Britain which seemed to go on for weeks. My Emancipation Day memories are a lot more hazy and it was dropped as a holiday in 1962.

"Young people in Jamaica ought to know where the pride, stubbornness and vivacity that is truly Jamaican came from. It pre-dates our independence struggle and lies in the ferocious battles for liberty fought by our courages African Ancestors"

How can young people in Jamaica have a healthy future without the facts of their country's turbulent past? They ought to know where this pride, stubborness and vivacity that is truly Jamaican came from. It pre-dates our independence struggle and lies in the ferocious battles for liberty fought by our courageous African ancestors. Their strength and determination enabled us to have an Emancipation Day. It is up to us to maintain the freedom that was won for us.

It was freedom without assets. The former slaves were without shelter, 'severance pay' or passage for the return trip home. My 98 year old Greataunt used to gather her 25 grandchildren and great grandchildren around a bonfire and tell them stories about how the slaves fought for their freedom and about the heroes who led them into battle: Tacky, Cudjoe, Sam Sharpe, Paul Bogle, and Nanny.

Nanny, Jamaica's Joan of Arc mustered up the strongest resistance against the English from her Portland base in 1735 when she led her troops on legendary pilgrimage across the island to join the Leeward Maroons. She became the symbol of rebellion and her followers adorned their ankles with bracelets made from the teeth of the fallen enemy. The Nannyites were too militant for the Leeward Chief, Cudjoe who two years later signed a peace treaty with the English. Nanny was furious but had to reluctantly accept the terms of the treaty. But she managed to secure for her people 500 acres of land, an extraordinary accomplishment in those days.

We must never forget that deliverance from slavery did not come out of any feeling of compassion or magnanimity on the part of the English. Of course England had a strong abolitionist movement that ate at her conscience but the Jamaican plantocracy studiously ignore it. But continued slave resistance in Jamaica and the Haitian war of independence led by Toussaint L'Overture in 1791 fuelled the England abolitionist campaign led by Quaker movement and William Wilberforce. In 1808 it had its firsts victory when the slave trade was outlawed.

Slaves continued to revolt and their owners retaliated with customary brutality. The turning point came in 1831 with the Christmas Slave Rebellion led by Baptist Minister Sam Sharpe and involving some 50,000 slaves who refused to return to work at the end of the holidays. What began as nonviolent resistance turned into a bloody confrontation in which hundreds lost their lives.

Two years later a bill to abolish slavery was introduced into the British House of Commons and a year later it became law. Each colonial legislature had to ratify this with its own law and this the Jamaican House of Assembly did with great reluctance on August 1, 1834.

But the freed slaves' problems were far from over. They were now tied to another kind of slavery, the waged labor economy whose value is dictated by the market. Revolts continued, the most famous being one led by Paul Bogle in 1865 in Morant Bay.

Labels used to identify slaves showed the name of their master

The determination to throw off our manacles threaded its way through to the independence struggle. In 1962 Jamaica won full statehood. This year Prime Minister PJ Patterson signalled the reinstatement of August 1 as a celebration of Jamaica's birth as a free people.

"Good evening, everybody, I am Zami Maitland*. I am here today because* Douglas isn't. I want to prevent this from happening to other families. That's why we brought you all here together. There are too many victims of hate and police brutality. The only way to stop this from happening is to unite and becomeone people, one nation. When Douglas was killed, I felt sad but also angry, because they let his case fall through the cracks by blaming his death on him. Nowthat time has gone by, I've managed to get over my grief, it made me think about action. I know that I am only a child but there are things that I and everybody can do, like protesting, marching, and sit-ins. Thank you for giving me time to express my feelings and thank you all for coming."

Those words uttered in Spartanburg, SC on the evening of July 18, opened the memorial conference and rally against government-sanctioned violence and hate sponsored by the Douglas Fischer Justice Project. A call to remember the senselessness of racism and hate and the failure to stamp it out. Zami reminds us that as adults we need to get over our feelings that we can't make a difference.

While we didn't number in the thousands or for that matter, hundreds, it is significant to note that change comes about when one individual, even a ten-year old like Zami, says that we must do something, we must take action. Did we make a difference by going to Spartanburg? Yes, we did; especially when our action is viewed in the context of the national move to combat police brutality and governmental misconduct.

Zami and other members of my family, along with many of you, will be taking part in the march/rally and call for Congressional hearings on September 12, as well as in the Stolen Lives Project on October 22. The events are planned in part to put a human face on the tragic situation for millions who have lost loved ones.

Best Buy picketed over '95 death

By Scott Wyman
STAFF WRITER

Family members of a black college student who died two years ago this weekend outside Spartanburg's Best Buy laid flowers at the store's front door Saturday as supporters pressed customers not to shop.

Errol Maitland

Errol Maitland, the man's adoptive father from New York, charged that South Carolina sanctioned violence against blacks. When he and about 30 supporters tried to walk inside the store chanting, a Spartanburg County sheriff's deputy turned them away.

Douglas Fischer, 25, died in July 1995 in a struggle with two store employees who pursued him into the parking lot after he was suspected of trying to use a fraudulent credit card. Fischer stopped breathing during a struggle.

Although his death was termed a homicide, prosecutors did not press charges, saying the employees were making a lawful citizens arrest.

"If we allow that to stand and call that justice, then we as a people have condemned to ourselves to live in bondage," Maitland said. "And no animal in its right mind would not resist bondage.... I will fight and resist until justice comes to Spartanburg, S.C."

Best Buy said in a statement this weekend that it deeply regretted Fischer's death but stood behind its employees and would vigorously fight charges made in a wrongful-death lawsuit filed last week in federal court.

Reaction among shoppers at Best Buy was mixed.

Randy Hill, a 20-year-old white Spartanburg resident, challenged why the group was terming Fischer's death a lynching and the product of racism. But Victor Humphries, a 28-year-old black Spartanburg resident who was leaving Best Buy after buying a CD, said he supported the picketers.

"They're doing the right thing," he said. "It could have been a family member."

Before Maitland and supporters picketed Best Buy, they marched through downtown Spartanburg to the county courthouse to protest the decision not to bring criminal charges in the case.

At a day-long conference on racism in the state, speakers pointed to the flying of the Confederate battle flag over the Statehouse and attempts to end affirmative action in state agencies as signs that violence against blacks is permissible.

Doualy Xaykaothao, a 23-year-old New York college student who attended Boiling Springs High School, told the conference that area immigrants from Southeast Asia are often harassed but are afraid to talk.

Another speaker, Tina Cates, appealed for help. Cates is the mother of a man injured last month after he and friends were stopped by an off-duty Jonesville police officer.

That incident ended in the death of 22-year-old Reginald Canty. Officer James Holt and a friend told investigators they pursued a car after hearing gunshots outside Holt's home. Holt has been assigned to desk duty while the shooting is investigated.

"My son is not perfect, but someone got killed and my son got hurt," Cates said. "I want to know why they aren't doing anything to the police officer. It's time for someone to be outspoken."

Dear Bernard and Amy:

When I was a kid and something bad would happen, my grandfather, Joe Tynan from Killarney, would look down at me with a twinkle in his eye and gentle comforting smile and say, "Ah, Bobby, 'tis an ill wind that blows no good to anyone." I bought a second hand car in January and the power radio antenna was not working so I decided to fix it. How hard could it be? After I "fixed" the antenna the only station that would come in was, you guessed it, WBAI. Now I'm hooked. No more Imus in the morning, no more "You give us 22 minutes, we'll give you the blah, blah, blah...." Now it's Armand DeMiele and John Harris and Jerry Brown etc.

I want to thank you and tell you how important you are to us. We now have a place where they tell the truth.

So when I'm 100 years old [because of Gary Null and John Harris] and have seen all the plays on and off Broadway [because of David Rothenberg] and they ask me I'll be able to say, "Yes, I am a card-carrying member of WBAI!"

Don't thank me for the contribution. Thank you, thank you, thank you, thank you, thank you for the programs.

Sincerely yours,
Robert M. Reilly a/k/a Bob

Hi Paul (Wunder):

My name probably doesn't ring a bell, but my voice sure would. I used to talk to you during your show (on or off-air), almost every week for just about as long as you've BEEN on the air at 'BAI!

I moved to Texas in December 1994 and I'll tell ya man, I miss WBAI and especially your movie reviews, Soundtrack and Jim Freund's Hour of the Wolf. I grew up listening to 'BAI (since the 60's) and it is culture shock enough to be in Texas, but THERE IS NO RADIO WORTH SHIT HERE!! There is nothing like 'BAI here. NOTHING!!

I've learned one thing: Despite all its flaws, 'BAI is unlike any other radio station...and I never realized how valuable it was to me until it was gone. Yes, I miss NYC, but I REALLY miss WBAI. A LOT!

Well, I just wanted to say 'hi,' and ask is there any way for me to stay linked to 'BAI down here? Air-checks? Jeez, I even miss the old ratty Folio. Any kind of mailing list you can add my name to would be appreciated, man. Really, it would!

I'm very happy though, that I decided to look up WBAI on the computer and found your website.... At least I can now get intelligent movie reviews from a person who KNOWS film! (You may be surprised to hear this, but film ads, even in TX are published with YOUR review blurbs on them!! No one down here knows who you are, so when I say "Let's check this movie out, Paul Wunder liked it!" and point to the ad in some Dallas newspaper, they all go "Who?" But at least I can show 'em your website.)

Oh and by the way, if you're ever in Dallas, check out the CONSPIRACY MUSEUM here. It is a trip...lots of JFK stuff and something on almost every slimy GOVT plot ever perpetrated!

Take care, man--I really hope to hear from you.

Best wishes,
Jerry Greenberg

P.S. If you or 'BAI needs a 'Dallas correspondent' let me know!!!

Free Form Live Radio by R. Paul Martin.
(rpmartin@interport.net)
Alternate Sundays 1:00-3:00am

September 7, "How could it have come to this?!" is the repeated chant of the Deadly Cult of the Tocks Tap in reaction to the news that this radio program will celebrate its eleventh Anniversary tonight! The Cult's official Reality Twister, Mr. Transparent, does point out that it's only five and a half years in weekly terms, but still, it squawks. Your host will express his thrill at having survived yet anaother full year on the air and will re-read "Before the Law" by Franz Kafka in order to bring the atmosphere of the situation home to listeners. There will be the usual blather about the past, invocation of karma pirates and complaints about being overweight. But at least the 1994, Spring Offensive is over!

September 21, Thirty years ago today your host began writing in a marble faced "Composition" book to which he gave the tile "Notes." This marked the beggining of his journal which assists him in dwelling in the past. Just one anniversary after another! He kept the paper version of his journal through ten volumes and then kept it exclusively as an electronic journal which continues to this day. Of course we'll carry on discussing diaies in general, as wwe've been doing, and your host's journals in particular during this program. There's no telling what revelations are going to erupt from reading the scribbles of a young RPM. The video portion of this program will consist of tapes of your host's belly growing.

October5 Autumm finds Little Squishy still resisting the plots of the Deadly Cult of the Tocks Tap the latest one of which involves the release of giant KRABs from the vicinity of Seattle to eat up parts of the electromagnetic spectrum and, well, excrete secret bucks for the lining of the secret pockets of the Central Committee of the Cult. These KRABs, disguised as a human named Jack Straw, have already removed part of the electromagnetic spectrum from another coast. Little Squishy wonders whatever could they be after around here? In the video portion of our program we welcome investigative reporter Nether Follicles who brooks the issue of crypto-KRAB connections to the Deadly

Cult of the Tocks Tap, only to be run afoul of Mr. Transparent, who's slick as....

October 19 In a rare pastry segment your host brings you into his kitchen to watch him bake one of his favorites: those tasty urinal cakes found in all the right men's rooms. For those not familiar with National Debris Preserve, where he lives, you will also be shown his innovative use of bacteria to keep the place much cleaner than it would be otherwise. In a superstition segment Pope Weaselpenis XVI takes up a collection from the faithful for a Rapture Runway where everyone will be able to ass-end into heaven without obstruction; as a motivation he shows the metaphysical carnage of prematurely ass-end souls wrapped around poles on I-95. FLASH: the Deadly Cukt of the Tocks Tap, concerned about being grabbed by Nether Follicles, retaliates with a new gag rule, t'ain't funny.

In addition to the full range of Afro-Cuban music e.g. Son Montuno, Rumba, Mambo, Charanga, and Guaguanco, host Chico Alvarez brings you the best U.S. Jazz, Rhythm & Blues, Soul, and Latin Jazz, and there's more--zouk from the French Caribbean, samba Brazilian Jazz, contemporary Haitian music and even sounds from the African continent. WBAI LOCAL ADVISORY BOARD IS LOOKING FOR NEW MEMBERS!

Are you currently a WBAI supporter? Are you interested in supporting the growth and development of one of America's foremost progressive radio stations? Are you willing to make a 3-year commitment to help WBAI assess its service to the community?

If so, please read on!

The Local Advisory Board (LAB) of WBAI Radio is looking for new members. WBAI Radio is a public radio station licensed by the Pacifica Foundation, which also holds the licenses for public radio stations WPFW in Washington, D.C., KPFT in Houston, KPFK in Los Angeles and KPFA in Berkeley, CA.

The Local Advisory Board is a committee created by the Governing Board of the Pacifica Foundation as required for community-based public broadcasting stations by the Communications Act. The mission of the LAB is to assist the Governing Board of the Pacifica Foundation, by:

- Reviewing the programming goals of the station;
- Reviewing the service provided by the station to our many listeners ;
- Reviewing the policy decisions made by the Governing Board;
- Advising and recommending to the Governing Board how the station might better meet the educational and cultural communities served by WBAI;
- Assisting WBAI with fundraising activities;
- Representing WBAI to the community;
- Assuming other responsibilities which are assigned by the Governing Board.

To meet this mandate, the LAB consists of between 15 - 30 members drawn from many different parts of the listening audience and from throughout the greater New York region. It meets on a regular basis throughout the year to plan and implement its activities, make recommendations and prepare its reports. Members serve one or more 3-year terms.

✪ ✪ ✪ ✪ ✪

We are seeking people interested in contributing to WBAI by serving on the WBAI Local Advisory Board. The LAB is recruiting new members to --

- ✪ Bring greater age, gender and ethnic diversity to the LAB.
- ✪ Develop new leadership.
- ✪ Strengthen the skills and resources available to WBAI.

We are especially interested in --

- ✪ People of color and listeners involved with different ethnic and cultural communities;
- ✪ Residents of the "outer boroughs" of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut;
- ✪ Supporters with skills in non-profit management, fundraising or public relations;
- ✪ People interested in promoting WBAI and in interacting with its audience.

If you or someone you know might be interested in joining the WBAI Local Advisory Board, we want to know! Ask us for more information or tell us about yourself . Write or call --
